The Alleged Census Frauds. The census enumeration of the southern states returned a population so much larger than had been credited to that section that a suspicion of fraud was raised. This suspicion, supported by the fact that but little of the incoming tide of immigration had flowed to the south, was vigorously used by the partisan press. South Carolina was especially pointed out as a state that could not, under all the circumstances, have made the gains in population reported by the enumerators, and specific allegations of fraud were frequently put forth by party papers. Superintendent Walker determined to investigate these allegations, and he selected for this work some of his most capable assistants. After weeks of diligent labor in going over the work of the enumerators in that state. General Walker has submitted the result of the investigation to the Interior department. It is demonstrated clearly that the census enumeration of 1880 was honest and accurate. and that that of 1870 was imperfect and defective throughout. The inquiry in South Carolina went back to 1860, tracing families then enumerated on through the census of 1870 and down to the present year. It was discovered that numerous families enumerated in 1860 and 1880, were omitted from the returns in 1870, though they had existed in the state continuously during those years. Countles that showed the largest increase this year, as compared with 1870, were most thoroughly investigated, and it was found that the last enumeration was correct, though in some cases it showed an increase of 80 per cent. This report of Gen. Walker puts an end to the cry of southern census frauds, but what is still more important, it demonstrates the honesty, and therefore the value of this year's census. Even a suspicion of unfairness or inaccuracy, if wellfounded, would impair if not destroy the worth of the entire work, and no doubt, it was because of this that Gen. Walker ordered the investigation in the south. There has been, during the last three or four years, a steady inflow of settlers into some of the southern states, but it has progressed so quietly that no public attention was directed to it. This movement has consisted almost entirely of families from northern states who have been induced to go south because of the general improvement in the condition and affairs of that section. The large and remunerative cotton crops of the last two or three years have made a country that was poor comparatively rich, and merchants, manufacturers, farmers and mechanics of the north have been quick to take advantage of the enlarged opportunities for money-making in the southern states. Almost every town or village can point to at least one new store that has been established by a new-comer from the north, and in the aggregate this makes a large increase of population. Right across the Potomac, in Virginia, there has been a steady increase of the number of northern im. migrants, who are now permanently located

The state election in Georgia has resulted in an overwhelming defeat for the bolters, but whether it will discipline them into subjection to party authority or madden them into further resistance remains to be seen. If the elections next week in the west are favorable to Hancock, then the Georgia democrats who supported Norwood for governor will hasten back into the regular ranks, in order to claim their share of the prospective national victory. The regulars, however, have won by such a large majority that they will probably insist upon administering to the Norwood leaders a taste of party discipline with the view of deterring future bolts. At any rate, and regardless of the western elections, the firm hold of the democracy upon Georgia is maintained. The Colquitt forces are strong enough to carry the Congressional districts. The fight within the party which raged so flercely during the recent canvass will, no doubt, be renewed hereafter. Senator Hill was conspicuous among the anti-Colquitt men, and it is said that a movement is already inaugurated to defeat him for re-elecplace. There was too much bitterness in the recent fight for it to die out at once. The personal animosities engendered will reappear to the discomfiture of some of the Georgia leaders. The legislature just elected will elect a U. S. Senator to fill out the unexpired term of Gen. Gordon. Senator Brown, who holds the position by appointment of the governor, has secured a majority pledged to him, and will therefore be elected.

and numbered in this year's census among the inhabitants of the Old Dominion.

Notwithstanding the exciting political campaign with its tendency to draw party lines very distinctly there are numerous internal quarrels and dissensions existing this year in both the republican and democratic parties, In Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia the democratic house is more or less divided against itself. In a number of Congressional districts there are divisions that render the choice of members doubtful. In the first district of Minnesota there are two republican candidates and all party authority has failed to heal the breach. There are local squabbles among the republicans also in one or two districts in New York and Pennsylvania, and in Massachusetts there is some dissatisfaction in regard to a nomination. The democrats have two Congressional candidates in the 4th district in Boston, and the present indications are that both will run through to the end, thus making the election of a repulican fairly certain. Mr. Morse (sitting member) has secured the recognition of the party machinery, but there appear to be enough Gaston democrats to defeat him. Two democrats are running in one Louisiana district, and independent candidates are out against the regular democratic nominees in other states. In Philadelphia the harmony of the democracy has been broken by a bolt from the city convention, and the nomination of two candidates for district attorney. It is evident that independent action in politics is becoming more popular in this country than formerly. In fact the independent voters are so numerous in all the close states that even the best-informed politicians confess their mability to predict results with any degree of certainty. The number of men who break away from party rule seems to be increasing each year. It requires some determination to break away from party lines, because the candidates and strikers are persistent in their efforts to argue the wavering voter back to his allegiance. Many men vote the regular ticket rather than be subjected to this annoyance, but when they see others take the lead they follow. This breaking away from party rules seems to be becoming general, and independence on the part of voters invariably contributes to improvement in the character of rulers.

LUNGS, CHEST, ETC.

His success has been most gratifying to himself and to many of the numerous patients who have been under his care, the majority of whom have been from the best class, Senators, Representatives, Lawyers, Olergymen, Merchants, Chiefs of Departments, etc. Without laying any empirical claims to infallibility, he has no hesitancy in asserting that he is willing that his professional record shall be compared with its percentage with that of any specialist or physician in this city or elsewhere. His success was so great that he has resolved to make this city, by SPECIAL REQUEST, his PERMANANT RESIDENCE. Among Testimonials of successful treatment already published, he would name those of Senator Voorhees, Senator Ingalls, Representative Lapham, C. H. Davidge, Esq., T. Somerville, Isq., Frank Geier, Esq., besides numerous others. Over one hundred References to the very best citizens can be examined at his Offices, 619 19th street n.w., and he wishes it distinctly understood that no name as reference is given or letter of testimonial ever published which has not been placed voluntarily at his disposal for that purpose.
